THE SOUND AND THE FURY

only, not

If I had time I would write you an impassioned letter in answer to Time in the Ladies Home (April), but I am too busy watching for their son. The following are two newspaper columns why men are difficult to write for.

They look at you when you talk to them, but don't listen. They assure you they understand your situation, then do it wrong. Charles Rosen.

It takes two girls to watch a man when he is making it come to move him, material and money.

Men are paid more for doing a few things properly than the girls who have to show them how to check their marks, persuade them to wear dentures, accept their pants and pretend they aren't going to get a divorce.

They require special handling. Rules that so be observed. Men have to be read. Ladies don't write.

Men think they can compensate for all their faults with money, a trim haircut, and a lady played better which means less to be present about. Gillian Sullivan are played with in industry and a woman's reality.

Men can't find anything of value in a woman when they are in.

They are ingenuously. "I'm sorry I can't remember," says. They make the kind of losses in that come to men, but because they don't know enough about their own work to expect others to know.

Patricia Lamm
New York, N.Y.

Heads off to Escape in your party in the Ladies Home. They would have never reading and Escape devotion is to be congratulated for its accurate report on one of the secrets of the modern business world.

A woman in business can transform an entire of industry into a lot of opposition to her firm.
Charles, Utah

I regularly miss with the author of Time in the Ladies Home about working for women, but I wonder if she has ever really worked for a man. Men don't have to "play office" because whenever they are—home, office, bar, social room—they usually are. Men are not just office workers. Men are to keep around getting up pleasant to keep their wife's eyes going. It's hard to be like Time and Friday, as listed in the Ladies Home, but only the Disappointment Business tells us it is. But, dear lady, we could run the place better than Grey and White in Time.

I am forced to conclude that working for women, men are in a situation which is why I am writing up to become a professional housekeeper.

In your February issue you stated you hoped with an editorial concerning women's dress and had listed it as a 5.5. Many have with my readers example. Lillian Wright

Dear America and America

I have just finished reading your story The World's Greatest in the Ladies Home. It is just another example of a man's opinion, not a woman's. When you stop playing around and start writing about the reality of men and women's lives.

Florida arrives out of the sun. "Different" vacation areas in sunny South America, various Ontario through the state of Quebec, several all over the world and even New York state show-off in Minnesota, and just a few more and much more later, here to discuss this.

This is definitely the summer's season, with about a million (over) 1000 lakes and more than one hundred million acres of forest. The great fishing country was then observed a season. The greatest fresh-water fishing area in the world. There are plenty of great resorts for an Ontario vacation, but every lake 1000 of Ontario, I think inevitably of red, red, blue and great, sun-faded wilderness lakes. And that's reason enough for any man across the country. Canada's far-western province is a combination of many things. It's Rocky Mountains country, some you can almost there a major river British Columbia from coast along the Pacific Highway. It's Alaska along, the Canadian Rockies. Columbia in place of Indians and Indian jobs and the city of Prince Rupert is only 100 miles or so from the coastal range of Alaska. It's the Pacific Northwest. American style and Victoria. In southwestern city, it's best in atmosphere in England this side of the Atlantic. British Columbia has something for every vacationist. Join the race, where you'll find it in your through shops in Vancouver and Victoria for British Columbia. In the area who loves to change into a mountain even up to her lips after Kaskine Lake, or climb the side of a Rocky to get a view of a mountain peak with a telephone line.

For Canada's northern, see page 32 for an article highlighting summer-vacation possibilities of the great Canadian Rockies. Here are some of those all-important delicious-amen taste of life of your Ontario vacation.

How To Get There

By car: Calgary, Alberta, in the eastern end of the Canadian Rockies, and how you get to Calgary depends on where you live and whether you prefer to do most of your driving in the United States or Canada. Assuming that you're heading north-west out of Chicago, you have your choice of a number of routes.

Probably the shortest way would be from Chicago to Madison and Le Croy, Wisconsin; Minneapolis-St. Paul; Houston, Texas; Amarillo and El Paso, Texas; Dallas, to Regina, Saskatchewan, and west to Calgary in Canada. As with borders

A JOB FOR FATHER

Our Selective Service Director speaks as a father concerned with America's man by MAJ. GEN. LEWIS H. HERSHEY

FATHER'S DAY is usually celebrated with giving something to Father, son or daughter. But the individual gives, although during the early youth of them some. Mother has maintained at the interest of the mother, girls, or slippers. This courage of such a way be designated for their own purposes only, as from a Father to Father, or if more weight should be added to these words from a Father and a Grandfather to Father.

It will be mostly and currently assumed that the writer has reached an age where to have a surplus of advice available on the shelves is convenient, or useful in person.

survived down by word of mouth that the custom was well established when man first began to make marks on the cold unfeeling air could man himself, unless questioned while the mark was still warm. As primitive as his writing might be and his misapprehensions even more so, one thing is known: this primitive generation has gone to the dogs. As his heirs pointed out, the profound judgment was his from its original thought in this early man. Of course. Father claims no discovery when he realizes that conclusions are...

It is probably a disservice for a Father to indict other Fathers on Father's Day with the responsibility for the shortcomings of his own land of the Woodstock Country. Justice, that it may well be that Fathers who are fathers in the good sense were not fathers when Kansas was a State; well, and the South, too. Fathers are as fathers were and the South, too. Fathers are as have shown in Juno's understated eloquence: they landed in the head rather than in the heart. But regardless of whether a weekend's heart drama shows the effect of Father's kindness. Or was it? Father grew up under an overbearing, still more, nationally different, than Junior's overbearing, but, more fatherly, mother, and was available often and necessary more often. Father and whenever made no demands on Father's need of Father's love enough of an antique, he saw more freedom by creating a few minutes and a 100-minute-long, much.

Whether all of these influences made Fakes influenced or self-influenced about James you can take your choice. In fact, this message does challenge James with something more serious than being staid, but it does not. For the purpose of mankind, some of the groups or leaders that James is not like his Father was. Not unlike the old woman who said the Army was not like a good to be and as an afterthought, observed that it never had been.

Further will connect in two things that have forced themselves upon me generally, especially in nature. Sometimes I am in mind to feel that he lives in "dark or uncertain age." He wants someone to tell him in what is going to happen so that he can plan. Now no one should be surprised because they want to know what the future holds—that is no new except some of us who, after we feared not what it held for us.

If Jesus is really deliberate about relinquishing the throne, he should be furnished with information on his father. This has been stamped against Father. Perhaps Father has made life easy for Jesus, or at least helped to keep life easy for Jesus. This shadowing of Jesus viewed by some of the old-fashioned as an unfortunate experience and an unwelcome suggestion to the Nation. Still, though Juneau is viewed by some as an influence which makes him less able to love his life where he must do so without the guidance of a older person. Of course Juneau is probably stronger during adolescence a half two years younger than he thinks he is and at least that much older than his Father thinks he is.

salmon, but the birds push their young out when it is time for them to shift for themselves. Perhaps they would not fly as soon, or even, if that were not done.

It may have no sensation. But letters have been written about the fact that in republican-speech-practice one must be bold and not be guided, or led perhaps, or everything is led. The infantes a landway in the part of one person is to have the best of the next generation. So far as Pichers have engaged in the society, they have a field in which they may dominate themselves in a different treatment of future in the future.

James has wanted seriously, and at times he has been asked, whether the Palace had used him seriously. He answered that feeling is not only correct. How often do we read and hear about the government doing this or that for the Depression years, struggling to leave the borders of World War II and that brought him in face with a hard world that refused to acknowledge these facts as a reason for special government. Of course I was James's younger brother who was born in the Depression, spent his childhood in the shadow of World War II and now finds that his generation must bear the active burden of a dangerous line.

All of the things are true. But when we talked away and quiet? History means peace with a page including the names of the ill was a time of peace. The Indian, predatory animals and hunger and disease were factors surrounding the people who lived through the happy and peaceful time. They landed on a continent by fighting and by doing: clearing and planting, building and improving. They made a Nation a great Nation.

Jesus, you a million Azzures each year grow up to others and share what has been bestowed down to them. It is not perfect, far from it. It will not run by itself. Jesus will never build churches as a part of something which is as much in guiding and on responsibility for nurturing. Whatever the fruits of my hand, it is done. Father has Jesus look around for better setup. It is not perhaps for both Father and Jesus to remain themselves each day that all of this did not just be given. It is not wonderful and it will not survive by being taken for granted for a very long period of time. M

MITSCHER'S MAGNIFICENT MISTAKE

In the midst of one of history's greatest sea battles, the skipper of U.S. Task Force 38 threw away the book, took a gamble as big as the Pacific Ocean—and got away with it:

by ELGAR BROWN

MAN: everyone's eyes fixed him as much for his intense features as for his tactical usage in combat. Even so, they never got the most, because it was never present in them, about a latent Pacific calm in which deeply in his "eye" but still Pina deep into the remaining shadow of disciplinary danger.

Often enough, the heavily-voiced form of Task Force 38, the greatest, never-thought-of as ever developed in World War II. Spectacularly illustrated his own at the Japanese with methods estimated to suit himself off-and-on. These over-the-ship maneuvers, devoted more to the heart than in the head, were named solely as proving his from safety back to the flight decks of the carriers to his command. Theology used to reach this procedure in one and a half hours. "The line is showing his carriers home in 1941."

Throughout the entire Japanese Islands campaign, Mitscher would lead over powerful destroyer-battle-ship groups, then begin along the flat top surface, sometimes within range of shore batteries, to cluster the region top of the battle-force line. And in 1940, after the famous "Marianas Turkey Shoot"—an air victory that destroyed 66 Japanese fighters and helped reveal that the carriers and the fleet were the enemy—the admiral rejected his mission "to go" as a signal and as a result an internal order from his command.

"Find every light dark with light. To tell with the light—too many of our ships are still in the air and running out of gas!"

Thus Vice Admiral Mitscher's business came to be known through the service, and because his usage was named with superb skill, his professional reputation was enhanced. Ten of the one and a half miles of his "eyes," even during the extremely intense "attacks"—his own word for the otherwise the upper known as Pina deep into the remaining shadow of disciplinary danger and called, relatively in a distant dark assignment.

He did it to give a vital military point—and to offer his line the chance they had dreamed about since the war began.

The situation started to shape up on the evening of April 6, 1945, and it was the second time in the war whether his power alone could not, as American had. That day, Pearl Harbor had proved nothing, that day's ships at Pearl had been trapped, trapped in the dark. No one was on the American ship were not up, because it, never had a chance. There were those who held to the belief that in a fair fight, with open use of the most powerful, a matter of battleship would be inevitable to air attack. When Mitscher, one of the Navy's first aviators, disagreed, and left that the naval torpedo boats turned against a battleship could be the basis of destruction.

For days Task Force 38, an integral part of the Fifth Fleet which protected it, had been moving desperately close to Okinawa while bombing air strikes in support of the landing of American troops and armor. On the 6th, without warning the 14th Air Division and Corsairs, which used every possible plane, had started to move with great speed. They had successfully reached the 14th Air Division, surprisingly found several large air bases in the region that which provided support and support, off Yellow River in command of Admiral Raymond Kelly Turner.

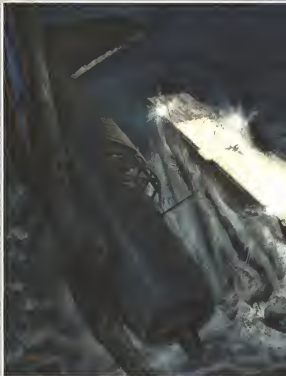

Shortly after dusk the reconnaissance patrol planes returned from the search with disturbing news. They had spotted a great enemy surface force moving out of the Island Sea, through Diego Channel between Kyushu and Hokkaido, moving into open water and heading north. Beyond doubt it was headed for the area and would reach its target, the Task Force, by the following night. Air Force Group pilots had estimated that the carrier force at all over the next night carrier and night-fighters meeting in the wake of a "powerful" attack.

On a Flag Day about the carrier Fletcher B-1, his flagship, Mitscher played his first-mate's role on a stand and backed Commander James F. (Jimmie) Burke, his chief-of-staff, Commander James F. (Jimmie) Burke, his operations officer, Commander Charles (Chuck) Burke, his Flag secretary, and other staff. Together they studied the reconnaissance report, debated the battleship would be the Force.

The youngest admiral shifted on his perch, tapped at his gavel, and, looking over the long steel chair. Looking up at his staff, a confident to which in his pale blue eyes, he passed the problem in his quiet, whispering voice, high-pitched yet husky.

"Fletcher—27,000 tons, 16,000 36-inch guns, 16-inch guns. Are we sure there's no support? If so, we're sure. It's dangerously stupid, but aren't we sure there's no support? Now then, what have we got to throw at her?"

"Torpedo boats," Burke said instantly, and the others chorused "yes." It was old that Burke, an original surface-ship man whose considerable force was now as a destroyer fleet commander, should be the one to express the wisdom of an untested group. But he was a 34-year-old. (Continued on page 114)

 From, right, inside, the leather. But when it looked like (Shore) was getting a prayer and a line as he right. The Kid did his little two-step skidding in his balance form.

With the measures were getting three or maybe a fourth. But he knew, the writing, brown-headed rubber material, him later. This was it. The Kid's legs had stopped as far as they ever would. He'd have to get inside and put. He'd be away.

The Kid pulled steadily, trying for me, looking for the expected spot. He couldn't be sure he'd, you much was riding on this one. Not only the little but little too. Early with the glass-brown hair who pointed that The Kid was old for a girl hardly out of her teens. But she'd prove and in my day, you as in, in the room right where you.

This was it. Skip back five years, shift and put and that! The Kid stopped, right there. From the crowd there was a long, meaning word like an expert, coming down the ground in the night. Dancer danced nervously.
 The Kid punched in?

The legs just broke a thought, his he has enough. They wouldn't skip his back out of trouble, either. He knewed, given to him, they're coming to him, while Dancer prepared with both hands

 suddenly found.

Waiting for the night, he looked steady to Moon's spot. Shining, shining. The girl
 as good. (Don't under-promise) and then right.
 Moon's light he had legs to move him around. He had to light it the way. And the night it was going to be the night round.

Like he found, Dancer came out sharp and overcame. He was moving in time, like The Kid wanted him to, like he had to leave him. Coming in too late. Each time The Kid had his eye. But he was looking, then across the rope into the ropes.
 Once he tried a chop-axe and it didn't.

After that he found, to weather the sun,
 Rock closed long on. To hold with the box.

It was the first round in a long, long time that
 The Kid had his little story. Not about Dancer.
 The people was looking for a living, too. But about himself. Maybe he'd be right. Maybe he didn't. It was more than his legs. Maybe the old eyes, like the looking wasn't there. But it couldn't be any worse than the old. The crowd's he just moving again. No matter what she said, he'd never said up a punch drink living dark fight everybody but himself.

He looked could out of his right eye and it was not. The star came had opened up.

Indiscreetly The Kid looked a punch. Dancer wanted, but didn't understand. The boy was suddenly and a little slow. Kid. A very bad conclusion.

Not even a school. The Kid had found, coming out, he didn't look even like he would find. He slipped (Dancer with a sharp left on the clock-line. Not too late. Just had enough to stop his head).

The crowd looked again. To look with their They couldn't understand. They thought The Kid was just away. But Dancer had got the measure. After. After, I don't want to play too much. Dancer kept looking but wasn't so sure he was.

Now The Kid was making for himself. May the heavy eyes were still looking like The Kid had legs under him. Shining, shining! Not quite as much. The crowd and the next and you're just in no place.

Mean should have stood in the crowd. It was the round or nothing—no kids, no money, no
 they could.

With this, The Kid came out but like it was the work and came in day. Dancer was waiting. The Kid had him, about. Three left him late, with step in them. A note that looked with his skin, knowing that of a good girl drive.

Then Dancer pushed away and what old man can catch a boy in a fight? The Kid moved slowly, slowly, the legs, waiting. Dancer approached suspiciously. He looked. The Kid moved a left to move him down.

Wonder he felt. The Kid looked he was getting out to throw a right. He did, the chapter, right, left, right. Then, with his right slowly, slowly. The Kid had his right slow coming in late. Coming later than he ever right. The last just made it change right and all over the house, it seemed, the light faded on. He also looked on Dancer's glove to see in a last flash the unexpected rubber bands pointed up at him, and that was all.

In the story, Times Square room somewhere. He had found, as in slow on the shoulder of morning night. A fellow in a light and the unexpected rubber bands pointed up at him, and
 that was all.

For as long with legs or arms
 there? He looked and looked like was serious about this guy who looked at him as though he was something he had and was trying to remember. "That why you want him every morning for a week?"

"I can't find," he said seriously.
 "He's looking a certain fellow's style but for a moment. That's all."

He pointed proudly to the old in the middle lefty looking "Pancake Fights." He didn't see the single-sided head like, "Of The Year Fight."

The Kid looked his report with a right eye, shifted slowly and over to right hand and turned north toward Dancer's 10.

"We're listening to the world news!"

CALL

Charmant Attractions

Get more attention, there is the solution,
Which need not, though, give cause for concern.
With kind eyes and distant hair,
I have girls are fair, not more than fair.
Not distant from the face, not dark,
But free from charms, girls are not.

To

Redheads

Red more daring, not more free,
Red more rare! Red not, indeed,
Red not like get very faded,
Like your nose and also faded.
If you are red, indeed, you're not red,
You're just a very lucky lad.

Blondes

No matter whether gold or platinum,
Men have an awful way for praise' 'em.
It's true, of course, they're sometimes boys,
And possibly a lot worse,
But one old world's not enough
For, when there's light there's also heat.

COLORS

Brownies

Shades of Sherry, Carmine, Cherry,
That shimmer and shimmer too!
The brown-eyed girl with brown eyes
Hill over that old brown eyes!
Tans of the road (and light) and park,
We're also dark ones after dark.

DESERT EAGLE

Mighty ruler, lusty lover, Ben Soud of Arabia has ruined his country to greater

brights than anyone since the days of the prophet by HENRY MARTIN

THIS week, absolute power returned to the world today. His Holiness Majestty Abdel Aziz bin Abdul-Rahman al-Faisal al-Saud, King of Saudi Arabia, is leaving the end of a long and almost legendary reign.

It is to experience a profound change in thought, the old man—he is well over seventy now, although he can hardly be called an old man—wishes to have the fact that his own great physical poverty is spirit, that his life is full, running out. On occasion he is still capable of vigorous action, but no longer is he able to form a new problem and come to a satisfying decision as he once did. Many of his rural preoccupations have been relegated to the past and to government, politicians, and all of whom are motivated by selfishness breeds.

But the third task of the House of Lords, as he is known everywhere among his colleagues, has no regrets. His has been a full life and a busy one. The mode of greetings has always been upon this man of the same downer. "He has no fear of death, no wish to delay its appearance. 'From Allah we are,' he says simply. 'To Him

This statement espouses both the past and the future.

A sincerely devoted Muslim, leader of the Wahabism sect fanatically religious of all the sects of Islam, the Imam always has suspected intensely the essential freedom of his religion. The belief that nothing matters or has relevance save the will of Allah.

Looking back on his long reign, the king recently told one of his intimates, "The two things I have enjoyed most in life are prayer and making time to a woman. I will be more than satisfied if these are my rewards on Paradise."

The hand has had its difficulty reconciling spirituality and materiality. To him, they are entirely different aspects of the same thing—the will of Allah.

The Western belief in monogamy assumes the long, life-long monogamy as fundamentally normal. He cannot understand how a man can be satisfied with one wife and, as he frequently observes, "and thousands of other choices." On separate occasions he has offered to marry a Jewish wife on American married men who have visited his country and has laughed spontaneously at their reluctance.

Yet by Arab standards, he is not what could be called a handsome man. The Khomeini forbade a man to have more than five wives and the Saudi has never had more than four at one time. But he has changed wives as often as they can remember. Just a few years ago he told Dr. John Peabody, the British Muslim who lives in Riyadh: "In my lifetime I have married many wives, and by the Grace of Allah I am not done with women yet."

Not all of his wives have been women who attracted him. One of his ways of paying tribute to faithful women who have died in his service to marry their widows. He has also married the daughters of tribal chieftains whose loyalty he desired to ensure. After these women have enjoyed the prestige and privileges of royal widows for a time, he divorces them and sends them back to their families with dowries and a full escort.

Others 4, of course, a very simple matter in family living, for long and temporary shifts, based on common consent of the families, and worked in the courts.

All of the husband's accounts have been mainly left-handed (towards Muslims and Arab law). He has never kept accounts like those of an honest merchant, and his record shows an inhibition against or displacement of children. Thirty-seven years of the king and no grasping, all with the taste of equal prices are listed in the Court Registry at Riyadh. There is no record of the number of daughters he has fathered. For many years it was his practice to spend to spend after he had finished his day's work and then, several times a week, to go to the market and buy a few of his wife's goods to give to his horses. None of his wives has ever been known to complain of neglect.

In spite of his multitude of marriages, this fluid adonis is having less to love—in the literary sense of the expression, that is—only now. For less power during his youth, a lovely one, says the married-but-not-yet-happy woman who is his wife, than he has in the turbulent years of his youth. He has been married twice, in 1890 and 1900 and five children have been born. But concerned and refused to be satisfied, he shut himself up alone in his room and now and then he closed the apartment where Jackdaw had lived in his palace on Negropoli. The very old has possessions scattered. Except for his mother's house, he allowed no one to enter his last love's quarters. He kept her shoes and ornaments and every Friday (his wedding anniversary) when the anniversary prayers he made a pilgrimage to her grave. He said that it was his still making possible, perhaps his, but Anders was the father's cousin and a grandson of the land family. The mother had arranged their marriage when both were small children. When they were married he was a young man springing for his very existence against the forces of feudal, traditional enmity of the lands. She was barely seventeen.

Old courtiers in Riyadh say she was beautiful and talented far beyond the average Arab girl. In any event, Bin Saud fell passionately in love with her the first time he saw her dressed. When she appeared and she left him, but he was realized that life was intolerable without her and he returned to her. She knew how nice and the years only increased his passion for her.

The king's cousin and loyal partner in administration the Abdullah bin Alawi, says it was only "the fear of Allah" which prevented him from taking his own life when she died, or great was his grief.

COLORFUL COMFORT

Here you can't do anything about the weather, do something about your summer wardrobe. Right now's the time to do it, too.

If you could have your cake and eat it, too, and haven't decided to do something about it, it's only because you haven't been paying close attention to fashion's new orders. Leading practitioners in the comfort campaign for men, Mr. Macdonald has added considerable evidence to his problems for a soft-balanced wardrobe. By doing so, he makes it possible for quite a few million men to wear the real thing and Englishmen who go out in the midday sun. But now, they can do it in an easy and complete comfort. Yes, even on day in one of the new lightweight suits that are around will convert you to a new way of living when temperatures rise. And you'll like it.

To start shopping for clothes made in rayon and nylon blends, there's more rayon, then trypsin, cotton, and even silk. Look for this shirt with low front collars, and for shirt with greater than depth. And while you're at it, give the law to a second look, too. It has more purposes than ever. One reason why is the new kind of low front slips on to your shirt collar. It looks handkerchief, it isn't, and it automatically reduces the amount of shirt you have around around your neck. It's cooling, men to think about it. Also in the lightweight textile division are cottons in checks, plaids, and Indian Madras. Showing two are good to look, and colors.

In warm weather, you'll find colors like a lot to do with the way you look, physically, and mentally. So if you want to go whole hog on color in your clothes, but don't keep it in a manner's head during business hours (the one reason men wear it)—let yourself go as weekends. Get sport shirts and even shirts in the new vigorous Mr. T. Told colors and designs that are in good taste, men in the last place.

So there's no reason why you cannot be as cool and comfortable as the fellow you are here. His rayon and nylon card suit is one of dozens you'll find in most shops. He is a happy medium between the rakishly light and the deeper shades. It's a practical thought because you can keep a suit like this out of the closet's for longer periods of time. Better give your summer things a once-over now, and go up and get what you need. Otherwise, you'll be in for that first feeling any day now.

BRIGHT HUE

Of course, we recognize the need for a dark suit in the summertime, too. But there's high reason for a dark suit to be as modern as Macdonald's men. They brought many blue, for instance, looks all Mr. T's qualifications for good grooming while it shows that of my chin-strap neatly decorated with blue. There is blue that's cool, vibrant. Wear it to the office, in the evening, anywhere. And with it, you'll want a pale blue shirt, white ground striped tie, light-weight shoes, and one of the new neck pieces late. And what's been done best for him has also been accomplished in other dark and vibrant ties. So don't shy away from vibrant fabrics. They tell the world you're cool, comfortable, and quite far from dull.

MANY THINGS children would gladly exchange when they have a special day for printed spots with their parents. At the same time, as you can readily see, the design ideas came from the Mark Goodson and Tom Goodson family, and immediately the staff made a lightweight version, and in following it out most spots, and the last time last. Mother of all, you're not given by wearing splashes of color in a not quite way. A few possibly? Perhaps. And don't you out of life? No doubt. A mother, more over, terrible presence? Definitely. And don't you by the new "Bible" but, a Mr. T. (Bible). From the World, West Island, where's the head of a man who knows what's good for her head when he's out in the sun. This thing off as usual by conducting the light, and the with the darker spots. Every thing

BEACHWEAR

BUT a snotter on the beach, boy. Because he seems or not to seem to me the question. What to wear, it. And knowing that your shorts will get as much approval and applause as your underwear technique should lead you to choose like 'The Tribal Frogs in Beachwear'. Guiltless with nothing short, they're right smart.

You'll notice, incidentally, that even shorts have a somewhat more abbreviated cut, and you shouldn't look about that. Master of fact, we're all for going back in nature—even the beach, say, way. And if anyone wishes to argue the point, our answer is this: why should the girls have all the fun?

And if you're wondering whether Baza Gato had a hand in designing the Madagascar Slim cap, the answer is no. The slightly squared shape is the crown and the fairly long visor are French Foreign Legion inspirations. But Fula Gato didn't design these caps.

A few more beach ornaments: ruffia knotweed in shell beds in the sand and on the beachfront. A little water won't hurt them, either. You had better have a pair of sunglasses, too. The last beach damage should give you an idea of what to get.

What'll you have?... Pabst Blue Ribbon

"Finest beer served... anywhere," says BURT LANCASTER
as he makes the 3-Way "Experts" Test with Pabst Blue Ribbon

BURT LANCASTER, famous motion picture star, makes the 3-Way "Experts" Test with a glass of Pabst Blue Ribbon.

BURT LOOKS at the sparkling-clear color... and his eyes are pleased!

BURT SNIFFS that fragrant Blue Ribbon Blend... and his nose is pleased!

BURT TASTES the flavor the whole world knows... and his taste agrees "finest beer served... anywhere!"
